Research and training

Internships with several expert psychologists are compulsory. Among these, at least one observational expertise and one involvement-based expertise must be carried out at the CPLU of the University of Liège under the supervision of Prof. Blavier. To better understand the issues involved in an expertise, attending a criminal trial before the Assize Court during the hearing of expert psychologists is also required to complete the programme. A portfolio will accompany you throughout your training. It will include internship reports, the report on attendance at the Assize Court trial, and literature reviews related to the internships completed.

Exams and assessments

Active participation in the courses is required. Students must attend at least 80% of the sessions to be eligible for the final assessment and, consequently, for the Certificate. An oral examination is held at the end of the law module to assess legal knowledge, and a written examination is organised at the end of the second year to evaluate the psychology subjects. The portfolio will be assessed at the end of the programme and will form part of the final evaluation before a panel of three expert psychologists.

Notice : The admission board may require participants to take a course on the administration, scoring and interpretation of the Rorschach test according to Exner's method if this prerequisite is not mentioned in their academic background.
